50X1-HUM

1. In 1948 the Moscow Military Veterinary Academy of the Armed Forces of the USSR and the Moscow Veterinary Institute were combined into one higher school under the name Moscow Veterinary Academy (Moskovskaya Veterinarnaya Akademiya).
2. This academy has the following two faculties: the veterinary faculty and the zootechnical faculty.
3. The training of military veterinarians for the Soviet Army takes place at the veterinary faculty, which takes on 200 new students each year. The course is five years.
4. Half of the number of students (males only) at this faculty are trained as military veterinarians. They receive free equipment, lodging in a hostel, food, and school appliances, and they also receive a monthly pay. The remainder of the students are trained as civilian veterinarians. The zootechnical faculty only trains civilians.
5. The academy accepts individuals who have completed their middle (secondary) education.
6. The academy comes under the budget of the Ministry of Higher Education of the USSR.
